

Bona Fide Errors

Section 229.21(c) states that a bank will not be considered liable for violations of the regulation if it can demonstrate, by a preponderance of evidence, that violations resulted from bona fide errors and that it maintains procedures designed to avoid such errors.

Reliance on Federal Reserve Board Rulings

Section 229.21(e) provides that a bank will not be held liable if it acts in good faith in reliance on any rule, regulation, model form (if the disclosure actually corresponds to the bank's availability policy), or interpretation of the Federal Reserve Board, even if it were subsequently determined to be invalid. Banks may rely on the commentary as well as on the regulation itself.

Exclusions

The liability established by this section does not apply to violations of Subpart C (Collection of Checks) of the regulation, or to actions for wrongful dishonor of a check by a paying bank's customer. (Separate liability provisions applying to Subpart C are found in §229.38)

Subpart C – Collection of Checks

Subpart C covers the check collection system and includes rules to speed the collection and return of checks. Basically, these rules cover the return responsibilities of paying and returning banks, authorization of direct returns, notification of nonpayment on large-dollar returns of the paying bank, and mandatory check indorsement standards.

Sections 229.30 and 229.31 require paying and returning banks to return checks expeditiously using one of two standards: the "two-day/four-day" test and the "forward collection" test. Under the "two-day/four-day" test a local check is received by the depository bank two business days after presentment and a nonlocal bank four business days after presentment. The "forward collection" test is when the paying bank uses comparable transportation methods and banks, for returns, as those used for forward collection. The paying bank can return checks directly to the depository bank of any bank agreeing to process the returns, including the Federal Reserve.

Subpart C, in §229.33, also requires a bank to provide notification of nonpayment if it determines not to pay a check of $2,500 or more, regardless of the channel of collection. The regulation addresses the depository bank's duty to notify its customers that a check is being returned and the paying bank's responsibility for giving notice of nonpayment.

Other areas that are covered in Subpart C are indorsement standards, warranties by paying and returning banks, bona fide errors and liability, variations by agreement, insolvency of banks, and the effect of merger transactions.

The provisions of Subpart C §229.41 supersede any state law, but only to the extent that it is inconsistent with Regulation CC.

The expeditious return requirements of §229.42 do not apply to checks drawn on the United States Treasury, U.S. Postal Service money orders, and checks drawn on states and units of general local government that are presented directly to the state or units of general local government and that are not payable through or at a bank.

Subpart D – Substitute ChecksGeneral Provisions Governing Substitute Checks – §229.51

A substitute check for which a bank has provided the warranties described in §229.52⁴ is the legal equivalent of an original check if the substitute check:

- Accurately represents all of the information on the front and back of the original check; and
- Bears the legend "This is a legal copy of your check. You can use it the same way you would use the original check."⁵

The reconverting bank must adhere to Regulation CC's standards for preserving bank indorsements and identifications. A reconverting bank that receives consideration for a substitute check that it transfers, presents, or returns also is the first bank to provide the warranties described in §229.52 and the indemnity described in §229.53.

Substitute Check Warranties and Indemnity – §§229.52 and 229.53

Starting with the reconverting bank, any bank that transfers, presents, or returns a substitute check (or a paper or electronic representation of a substitute check) and receives consideration for that check warrants that the substitute check meets the legal equivalence requirements and that a check that has already been paid will not be presented for subsequent payment.

Such a bank also provides an indemnity to cover losses that the recipient and any subsequent recipient of the substitute check incurs due to the receipt of a substitute check instead of the original check.

Expedited Recredit for Consumers – §229.54

Section 229.54(a) sets forth the conditions under which a consumer may make an expedited recredit claim for losses associated with the consumer's receipt of a substitute check.

⁴ A person other than a bank that creates a substitute check could transfer that check only by agreement unless and until a bank provides the substitute check warranties.

⁵ A bank may not vary the language of the legal equivalence legend.